THE "SHEN-PAO" ON THE WYOMING RIOTS.

The Courier translates the following article from the Shee-nao :-It is said in the Book of History "Yu (the cently annexed by them for at least a year, Great) strenuously urged the people to exchange what they had for what they had not." The odes say "Let us go to that happy land," both extracts showing that the ancients thoroughly understood, and were resolved to enforce, the precept "Treat kindly the men from afar." Kindly behaviour towards homeless emigrants is a sentiment that one would imagine was universal, and was confined to no race or country; but the inhabitants of Wyaming seem destitute of it. The gold-mines in California originally attracted men eagor for wealth from all over the world to wash for gold. Labour, however, was very dear, so Chinese, whose wages were small, and who were more industrious than the local people, were gladly employed by the rich, and con- Northern Queensland was discussed, and, as alferred not an injury but a benefit on California. ready cabled, a committee was appointed to pro-The labouring classes, however, took quite an mote the movement and the fermation of Northother view of the matter; treated the Chinese, orn Queensland into a self-governing colony, with contumely, kicked and struck them, and did their best to expel them. Now this panie about contagion was not Sir Saul Samuel. The Government the medals and clasps for the New South Wales of the United States, pressed on the one hand contingent in recognition of their services in the by their own people, and hampered on the other Soudan. by existing Treaties with China, sent a special envoy to China. A fresh Treaty was then The Soudan medals for the New South Wales negotiated, placing a limit on the number of Contingent are being forwarded by the steam-Chinese arrivals from China. We, however, have ship Orient. never heard any limit has been placed on the number of American arrivals (missionaries, for instance,) coming to China, nor do we know of any limit being placed on Chinese arrivals in any other country in the world. It was indeed of Works in New South Wales, read a paper on asserted it was not wished to look down on that colony at the Royal Colonial Institute to-Chinese; but in reality it was a fresh insult to day. the Chinese even greater than the insult of examining for small-pox. Why do not Chinese go elsowhere and abandon their former road, instead of continuing to go to this Wyoming, where they are killed and beaten? But there were coal minos in that neighbourhood, local rates of wayes were very high, and the mine-owners hired Chinese. But the local people regarded the Chinese as interlopers peaching on their fields, poured all their wrath on the Chinese, plundered them, set | ders at 102 will receive 48 per cent., those above fire to their houses and quite destroyed them, killing some score of Chinese. Those who were driven off suffered terribly from exposure, and had it not been for the protection afforded by the soldiers sent by local authorities none would have been saved. Why were these people of Wyoming so fierce and cruel? Each Chinese labourer supplanted a native labourer, but it was not Chinese employers who called in the Chinese but American employers. Chinese labour is cheap; Chinese live economically, and getting enough they do not dare to ask more; there is no intention to lessen the value of local labour. It is with the employers the labourers should argue; if they won't listen, petition the Government to do something; and if the Government won't enquire then the employers must dismiss Chinese for natives and no longer employ the former. But suddenly to behave in so outrageous a manner is to disgrace their country and to court comment from other nations on one hand. and on the other to deprive the mines of the benefit of cheap labour; and the labourers are brought within the mashes of the law, they get a had name for giving no help, and though they may disavow any responsibility, they might at least show some pity to the Chinese. But the world is large, and steamers trading with China are many; those eager for wealth can they not go elsewhere? But for the sake of gold in California men will risk their lives, though during these many years we have never heard any returning enriched to China. Why run such risks to get rich! and why cross the ocash for this purpose when association with men so cruel and fierce is necessary! Yet it is not easy for Chinese to leave America. Those who loved their homes would never have left to go elsewhere.
